

Socialism VS Communism

These terms are often used interchangeably, even though there exist big differences between them.

SOCIALISM

- SOCIALISM suggests that contribution is made from everyone according to their ability but they get back according to the size of their contribution.
- Profits are distributed depending on the results of every individual's work.
- There is a central government that owns all the means of production, decides on the distribution of goods, and makes plans for the economy.
- There's personal and public property.
- Socialism gives the individual the freedom to choose whatever he wants to believe in.
- Socialism is primarily economical and can coexist with a variety of political systems.

COMMUNISM

- COMMUNISM suggests that everyone in society contributes and works according to their ability, and gets back everything according to their needs.
- Everyone has free access to all the goods that the community has to offer.
- There is no government because everything is owned collectively by every member of society.
- There's no private property.
- Communism rejects all religions
- Communism is a political system

Despite the fact that they sound almost as if they're able to create heaven on earth, people want to become rich, to have more private properties, and to have power. As long as this human nature doesn't change, neither socialism nor communism will ever work.
